

Drama

At Tympani we have a wide experience of producing dramatised scripts.

We work with our clients to deliver an accurate representation of their required scenarios, we arrange for casting sessions, book the actors, arrange the locations, organise any filming permits and so on.

Drama can be humorous!

This example was taken from a programme we produced to explain what workflows are and how they can be used to gain a business advantage.

We took the power of mime to illustrate the concept of workflows and introduce the idea that even simple things like getting up in the morning follow a workflow pattern, and convey the problems encountered when the order of the workflow is mixed up.

This production was totally set in a studio.

We built the set from simple backing flats to create a realistic office environment.

Studio shooting has the advantage of having a totally controlled environment which is an advantage when recording lengthy dialogue sequences.
