

Studio shooting

A television studio is an environment that offers total control over your recording.

With precise camera shooting combined with accurate lighting and total sound control the studio environment will allow you to record more in each day than is usually possible on location.

Conventional studios can be designed to any specific look and come in a variety of sizes to suit any requirement and are available all over the country.

Our heritage is in studio production, so you can use our skills to deliver your messages effectively.

Either live or pre-recorded.

Virtual Reality is a fantastic way to bring static things to life.

The set is built electronically, then with studio wizardry superimposed behind the presenter.

You can add moving parts to the set for the real 'wow' factor.
